

As a neurologist specializing and board-certified in pediatric neurology, clinical neurophysiology, and neurodevelopmental disabilities, I fully support, regularly implement, and heartily recommend all of the materials from Growing Families International.

For almost 15 years, I have had personal experience learning, implementing, and teaching these sound principles.

These materials span the development of the child, from before birth, to the teen years and beyond. Over and over, I have seen these principles applied in my practice, slowly, diligently, and humbly, and have seen tremendous growth and developmental maturity, improvement in immaturities of moral development such as self-control, impulse control, and other-centered thinking. These three character qualities are no longer intrinsically taught or learned in the early years, and the unfortunate results are evident daily in the practices of family physicians, pediatricians, psychiatrists, developmental pediatricians, and pediatric neurologists.

These materials put Biblically-sound, time-proven, common-sense "tools" into the hands and hearts of parents. They work. Even in situations where there is severe neurological dysfunction in a child, there are still issues of character, moral, and self-control training which need to be addressed by parents and care givers - the Biblically-based materials of Growing Families International are among the best tools available anywhere.

Robert P. Turner, MD, MSCR

Associate Professor, Departments of Neurosciences, Pediatrics, and Biostatistics, Bioinformatics, & Epidemiology

Director, Pediatric Epilepsy Program

Charleston, SC, USA 29425