

The GFI ministry has influenced our family for twelve years through tapes, classes, conferences and fellowship with like-minded families. As a result, our marriage has been strengthened and our children see the importance of working on our marriage. As a family, we have become more others' focused rather than self-centered. We've gained wisdom, confidence and unity in parenting by principle. We have learned how to effectively and positively train our children in responsible behavior and attitudes. This purposeful training has given them tools to guide them to wise decisions in new situations. We've learned to parent without anger as a motivator and give our children the freedom to fail. We have been encouraged to develop family loyalty and intra-family relationships. We all like each other and choose to spend time together. It has helped us adjust our parenting to the needs of maturing children. Lastly, this ministry has given us tools to encourage other families in their marriage and parenting.
