

In 1995, we had our first little baby boy. We spent much of the pregnancy reading any parenting books we could get our hands on, most of which were borrowed from the local public library. We were well immersed in how and why we should use attachment parenting with our new baby. However, by the grace of God, our new little boy didn't read the same books we did. :-) He spent much of the first two months of his life screaming, which led to more and more disharmony in our home. We didn't know what to do!

One evening, my wife got on a chat room on the Internet and met a woman named Anne Marie who kindly mentioned some helpful things that we could do to help our baby learn to be calm and to sleep better. We were amazed when her ideas immediately worked. She recommended that we purchase Babywise (we didn't know her husband was one of the authors), and when we had read it, we had to acknowledge that its advice was more biblical than most of the other books we had read.

We soon purchased Preparation for the Toddler Years and eagerly applied the principles in it. Our little boy grew to be a blessing to others and to us. We later took GKGW with a local church.

We have been blessed to use the Ezzo's materials with all of our five children. We are thankful for the godly advice we've received from them and for the foundation that has been laid in our home.
